

When financial tycoon Jaydon Cameron figures out someone is trying to scam him, he shuts it down immediately and makes an example of the thief. A quick plane ride later, and he's convinced things are not what they seem, but by some divine intervention, he finds the last thing he'd ever expected—Love. The only thing was, would she love him after everything was said and done?

With nothing more than the hope of a miracle and a prayer, Victoria Mercker sent an email in hopes of finding a solution to the majority of her problems. Little did she know that her life that night would be radically changed, and that she'd find herself in strange place, with a family she doesn't remember, and no memory at all of how she ended up there. As she strives to get her memories back, she begins to understand that sometimes getting what you wish for means you lose everything.
